Note on handsThe main text of the letter is written in an upright and neat secretary hand (not Spenser's); the subscription and autograph signature are in Grey's usual italic hand. The address is in Spenser's usual secretary hand, while a distinct italic hand appears in the endorsement, presumably added later during hte filing process in London. The italic marginal note appearing at the foot of the text ('threasurer') is probably in the hand of the secretary who drafted the letter; these 'addressee notes' were often added to letters before they were sent off for Grey's signature, ensuring that the secretary subsequently responsible for sealing and addressing the packet would know where it was to be directed. There has been some damage to the right-hand margin of the page.

* 9 repaire{d}] the manuscript has been damaged along the right margin, effacing characters in this and succeeding lines. Where the original reading is fairly clear, we have supplied missing letters in {}. In less obvious cases, we have used the mark of omission {...}.

 $\tilde{1}^*$ 15 thereof] 'thereof' inserted above the line, with a caret mark.
