Text

It may please your Lordships; Although I know that this gentleman Mr Lambert is sufficiently furnished with the Commendation of the Lord Deputie, and such as were Gouernoures before him, aswell for former service as for his late maymes received in Vlster; yett forasmuch⁵ as in the Accion wherein he was now hurt, he w{as} one that followed my self, the Charge of that {...}^{*} being then committed vnto me, & that I was then a{n} eye Wittnes of his doinges, I am to Commend him also to your Lordships for his value & manly behaveour, beseeching you¹⁰ to take this knowledg at my handes, that nothing could bee better performed, though the successe fell out hard for him self. And now that beyond all opinion god hath preserved him in lyfe, & the same by losse of his lymmes may bee miserable without some relief from her Maiesty
I am an humble sutor to your Lordships for him, that by consideracion of him otheres may bee incoraged, to deserve as he hath doune. And so I humbly end; Dublin, the vijth of March./ 1584.

Your Lordships humbly at Commaund, 20

John Norreys

¶ Note on hands The address and the main text of the letter, including the subscription, are in Spenser's characteristic secretary hand. Norris has added his autograph signature. The endorsement, in a distinct italic, was probably added upon entry of the letter for filing in London.

* Address {Maiesties} part of the address has been obscured by removal of the bands originally used to seal the letter, but the formula is standard enough to warrant this suggested reading.

¶ * 7 {...} here, as in the lines immediately above and below, the manuscript has been damaged.
