□ Note on hands The text of the letter is in a neat and regular secretary hand (not Spenser's); some of the signatures appear to be autograph (particularly Ormond's which looks fairly convincing), despite the fact that, as the endorsement indicates, the letter is a copy; but they are almost certainly fanciful impostors. The endorsement is in Spenser's mixed hand, and his certification and autograph signature appear at the foot of the main text.

□* 18 commaund] the secretary has actually written 'conmaund', with an otiose flourish above to reinforce the double nasal; the intention, however, is clear, and we have supplied the missing minim.
