Text

Sir, whereas I graunted vnto my seruaunt Richard Mompesson the life of one of the Spaniardes taken at the fort of Smerwick to be raunsomed for his most benefitt, I vnder-stand, that sithens the prisoner being by him carried vp to london & committed* is through the negligence or rather with the privitie of his keeper (as is thought) escaped, by meanes whereof he is in daunger not onely of the losse of the raunsome which was covenanted, but also of private costes¹⁰ bestowed vpon him & other charges whereat he hath bene in carrying him ouer, besides him* owne travell to his great hindaunce. Wherefore vnderstanding that by your self he was committed, I am earnestly to desire you in my¹⁵ said seruautes behalf, to afford the sollicitoures of his cause there, which will resort vnto you, what favour and furtheraunce you may, for obtayning of the said Summes against the keeper yf in equitie he shall appeare vnto you to be guiltie of the cause, or otherwise bownd by law to the answering thereof. for the which I shall account my self greatly behoulding vnto you*

Walsingham for Mompesson

¶Note on handsThe text of the letter, including the subscription, and the address are both in Spenser's characteristic cursive secretary hand. Grey has as usual added his own signature. The notes added at the foot of the text and the endorsement ('Mompesson', 'Wals. for Mompesson') are in a distinct italic hand, probably Spenser's; these notes seem to have been added to remind Spenser (or another secretary) that, upon sealing of the letter, the packet should be addressed to Walsingham.

* 6 & committed] 'committed' inserted above the line, with a caret mark.

¶* 12 him] sic.

¶* 24 you] 'you' inserted above the line, with a caret mark.
