Maie it please Your Lordshipes Having this daie receaued her Maiesties lettre of the xxviiijth of Ianuary Directed to me the Lord Deputie. I haue according the contentes therof, vpon consultacion had with the residue of her Maiesties Councill heare, sett downe an other cashe of seven hondered men to beginne the last of this Moneth: And where for the more speadie⁵ easinge of her Maiesties burden (which wee cane not but be sorrye that her highnes findeth to waigh so heavie,) wee would haue restrained the daie of the Cashe to a shorter tyme, Yet consideringe booth the distaunce of the waies (some of them being in the furthest partes of Mounster) and no money remayninge to satisfie their paies, wee were driven to extend the tyme so farr for avoiding of harmes and mutynies which might ryse amongst Companies to be dischargd and no paie to be made to them. Assuringe Your Lordshipes that yf wee had bine as well hable to satisfie them their waiges, as wee are willinge and 15
readie to obey her Maiesties will to putt them owt of paie, the daie of their dischargd should haue bine too morrowe; For the lettre was not one hower in the handes of me the Lord Deputie, but that I called a consultacion of the rest, whervpon wee presentlie agreed vpon this Dymynucyon, wherof two hondered might within three daies haue bine 20
dischargd and sent awaie yf there had bine money wherwith to paie them: wee haue in a scedule herewith named the Capteins of the vij^c nowe cashed and the provinces where they serued, Emonges which the three barwick bandes are thought meate to be returned and to be sent to Chester there to expect her maiesties resolucion, whether they shalbe employed in their ould place of garryson in Barwick, or otherwise seuered to 25 the places of their byrth or former beinges, wherin wee praie your Lordshipes to haue your speadie direction. And that aboue all thinges your Lordshipes will consider of the certificat latelie sent by me the treasurer and mr Auditor, howe much treasor there wanteth for satisfieng of those formerlie dischargd, and adding thervnto the vij^c souldiours 30 nowe cashed, to dispatch so much Money at the least as maie Necessarilie serue for dischargd of all the Nombres: For your Lordshipes maie consider the estate of the poore souldiours and howe hard it were for them to be dischargd withowt paye, carieng with it, besides slaunder to the state, eyther desperacion in the poore men causing them to 35 come into some Disorder, orelles to falle into the dainger of famyn and starvinge, or be driven to breake the lawes so soone as they sett foote in England to the disscoradginge of all other to be implioed in her Maiesties seruice: Of all which wee hartelie praie Your Lordshipes to haue regard. And that your willingnes to send treasor in a case 40 of so great ymportance and necessitie. May answer our readines to obey the direction of her Maiestie and of your Lordshipes: For the sooner the treasour arryveth, the sooner shall this great chardge of her Maiestie cease, and till then we haue no waie to ease yt; vnlesse speciall order from her Maiestie or your Lordshipes be given us, that withowt any respecte 45 the direction be executed, which receaued, god willinge shall not be Delayed: And so cravinge your Lordshipes speadie resolucion herein wee comytt the same most hartelie to almightie god: At ¶Note on handsThe text of the letter is written in a fairly cramped but regular secretary hand (not Spenser's), distinctive for its bold up- and down-strokes. Spenser's familiar secretary hand appears in the address. The endorsement is in a fairly conservative secretary hand, with a few italic forms, and was probably added when the letter was being filed in London. The signatures concluding the letter, including Grey's, are autograph. The distinction between majuscule and miniscule forms in this hand is a particular problem. In our transcription we have in several cases been forced to choose rather arbitrarily; as these decisions do not much affect the sense of the letter, we hope they will not occasion overmuch anxiety.
