¶ Note on hands The address and text of the letter, including the subscription, are in Spenser's usual secretary hand, though the text of the letter is somewhat rough and cursive. Grey has added his characteristic signature. The poor quality of the microfilm copy of the letter has obscured the endorsement.

* Address To the...Majesty parts of the address have been obscured in microfilm reproduction, but the reading is clear enough to confirm that Spenser followed his usual phrasing and spelling in this instance.

¶* 10 and] this duplicated word is apparently evidence of a slip in Spenser's copying. This kind of error strongly suggests that some of the surviving letters were fair copies produced from drafts.

¶* 20 ••••• Tipperary 'Limerick' has been deleted and 'Tipperary' inserted above the line.
